

James Wright Barn

This barn was featured in The Sunset Magazine, which has a national distribution, in about 1990. It is located at 2700 W on Webster Lane in Charleston, Utah. It was built in the late 1800s by James Wright, who, at that time, also owned the property. It has a very sturdy construction of native pine timbers and siding. It was used mainly for horse stables and hay storage, early on.

Ownership passed from James Wright to the Webster Family, where it has remained continually to the present day. After Mr Wright, Elisha Webster came into possession of it. He was a famous barn-builder in this area. Then it passed to Clyde Webster. Then in 1939, Elisha and Clyde remodeled the barn to accommodate a dairy herd. Then Grant took over the barn and property, and the dairy operation continued to 1997. Grant lost his wife about that time, so James Webster and Kara now are caring for the family and farm.

Informants: Grant Webster, James and Kara Webster, who also provided the picture to Dr RR Green.
